EL RANCHO DE LAS GOLONDRINAS
The Southwest's Premier Living History Museum

PAINTING & PHOTOGRAPHING ON MUSEUM GROUNDS

El Rancho de Las Golondrinas is a living history museum situated on a historic ranch property that dates back to the early 1700s. The property was an important paraje, or stopping place, along El Camino Real, the Royal Road from Mexico City to Santa Fe. Today, the museum's 500-acre campus offers several picturesque opportunities for painting and photography groups, classes, or individuals.

El Rancho de Las Golondrinas requires a Day Use Permit for plein air painting and professional photographic activities. All painting and photography classes and/or groups with more than five participants are required to schedule their visit with the Special Events and Site Rental Manager in advance. El Rancho de Las Golondrinas defines "groups, classes, and individuals" as the act of non-commercial painting or photographing outdoors with an instructor/group.

Non-commercial is defined as painters or photographers utilizing the grounds for creative, personal use, and not for the purpose of mass-produced prints, merchandise, or product. Individual paintings or photographs featuring the museum's likeness to be exhibited and sold in a gallery setting is allowed. Photographers conducting headshots, wedding photos, and profile-building shots must apply for a Day Use Permit. Photographers with models in excess of three individuals are subject to Group Rates. For commercial use of the grounds, please contact the Special Event and Site Rental Manager.

All painters and photographers are required to sign the Day Use Permit Agreement before accessing the museum grounds. Day Use Permits are due at the time of the reservation, along with a signed copy of the Agreement. Dates will not be held without payment.

Group/Class Day Use Rates:
Up to 20 People: $150
21-40 People: $300
41-60 People: $450
For groups over 60 guests, please contact for pricing.
